

"From the Morning Mist"
by Claire Goldrick, Inc.

The painter Claire Goldrick was born in Washington, D.C., but her family soon moved west and she spent most of her childhood in Albuquerque, New Mexico. "I knew I wanted an art career when I visited galleries in Santa Fe and Taos as a child," the artist remembers. "I found my fulfillment at an early age creating art." Throughout high school, she earned money to board her horse by taking commissions to paint portraits of her classmates for their parents. As she matured as an artist, studying informally with friends and taking a workshop with established artist Roy Andersen, Goldrick began to gravitate towards western subjects and landscapes. This was only natural, as she was spending a great deal of time on horseback at friends' ranches in New Mexico and Colorado. Having made her home for more than 30 years in the mountain town of Pagosa Springs, Colorado, the artist also spends part of each year in the Bitterroot Valley of Montana, drawing inspiration from the Southwest to the Northwest of America.
